hile some Upland students take advantage of summer vacation to go to the beach, summer camp or stay home and watch soap operas, others are spending the time in school summer school.

Contrary to what you might think, summer school is not just for those who have to make up classes from the school year. Some students choose to attend.

"I signed up 'cause I wanted to," said John Durante, 11, during his ecology class. "There's nothing else to do between 8:20 and 12 (noon) so you take it.'

But Durante and his 20 or so classmates didn't seem to find their distillation and filtration experiments a chore. Instead, they actively participated, asking questions and helping each other.

Under the supervision of Upland Junior High School teacher Bill Barron, the students from grades 4 through 8 gather weekday mornings to learn more about the soil, air and water that surrounds them.

The students come from all over the Upland School District to meet in the Upland Junior High classroom for the two-week session.

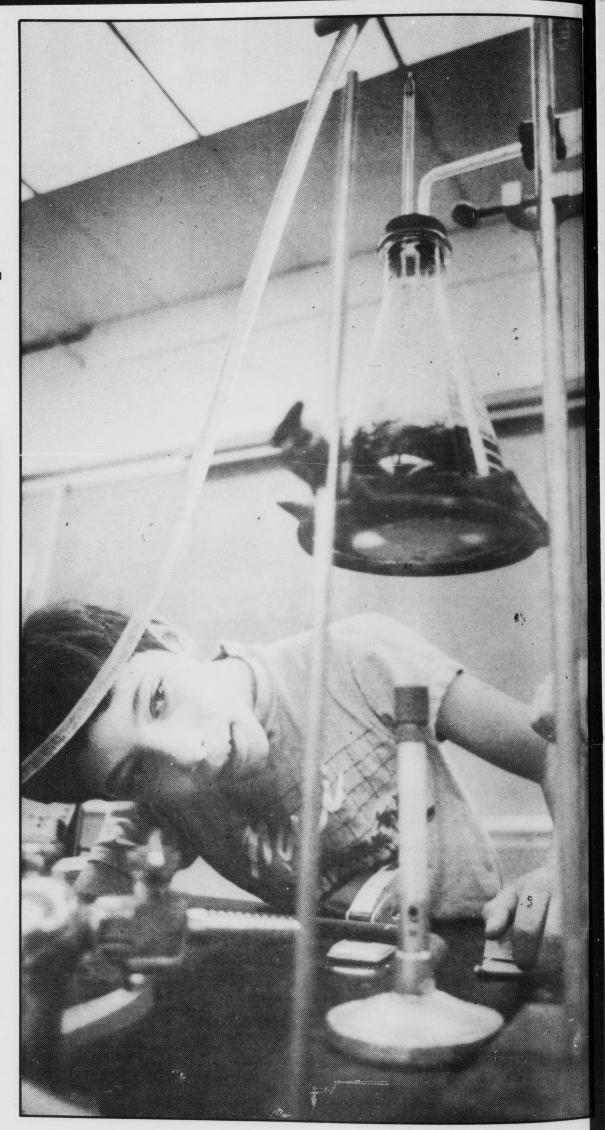

Durante and his partner, Dan Ryan, 13, were examing rainwater collected from the school roof during a recent rainfall. By adding certain chemicals to samples of the brown water they were able to determine that it contained plenty of silica, a glassy mineral, and iron, most likely from the roof.

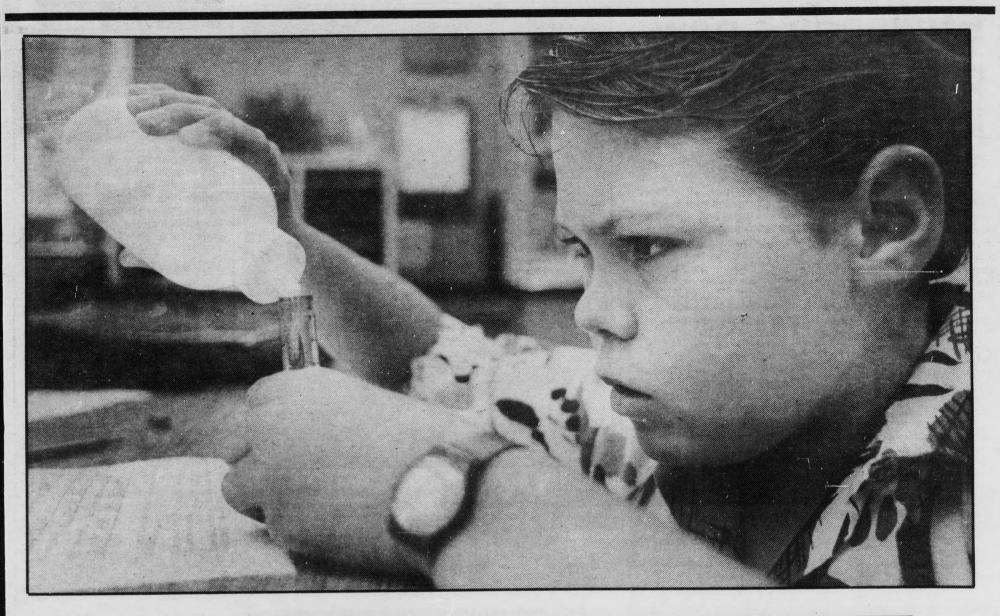

'It's my favorite subject except for recess," said Durante, who took model rocketry during the first summer school session. He is now taking computer and art classes, along with Ryan was a bit less enthusiastic.

"When I was in seventh grade last year I failed (ecology), so I'm taking it again," he said. Meanwhile, other students were filtering powders out of water, checking the chemical balance of acquarium water and turning tap water into distilled water with an apparatus similar to those used to make moonshine.

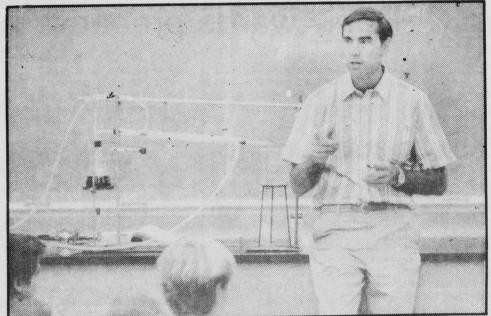

Barron keeps his lessons brief and lets the students concentrate on their own work. Because of the age span in the class, he has some students help out the others.

"I have the more experienced kids helping the younger kids," Barron said. "I find both gain a great deal from this."

Etiwanda's new principal finds job challenging

By Tanses Gulsoy

"Excellence is hard work," said Linda Schneider, the new principal of Etiwanda High School.

Coming to her new job with 15 years of experience in education, the 13-year Upland resident said she is "committed to excellence."

Before she took her new job on July 1, Schneider was the assistant principal at Montclair High School for 15 months. Her experience before then includes being the assistant principal in charge of guidance and instruction at Upland High School for 13 years.

Running the three-year-old Etiwanda High is a gratifying challenge, she said. The school has recently won the San Bernardino County level of the United States Academic Decathalon and 1985-86 Western U.S. area Drill Team Nationals

"I am not apprehensive," said Schneider of the challenge of succeeding outgoing principal Don Culp. "I worked with Don Culp. He trained me.'

"When something works, no need to change it," Schneider said. She said she intends to make changes only as they are needed by the students' changing needs.

At present, Schneider will implement some programs that were being considered during Culp's term and continue others that were already in existence when she took office.

Schneider will start a Saturday work and study program for students who have been truant or disruptive during the week. On Saturday's they'll be required to do service work for the school or to make up school work that they missed.

Another program she'll implement is a Learning Center to provide individualized learning programs designed to remedy the shortcomings of students who have exhibited some academic problems. Because the student population is growing by 400 every year, classroom space is a problem at Etiwanda High,

she noted

Schneider said she thinks sharing decisions with the staff, students and parents at Etiwanda High is "critical." She said she intends to seek their advice and inform them of changes and decisions.

Young Citizen Awards presented

Nineteen young Uplanders were awarded for their citizenship by the Upland-Foothill Kiwanis Club last month.

The sixth and eighth graders were honored with "Young Citizen Awards" for their own actions and for promoting good citizenship among other students.

This is the fifth year the club has presented the awards. It makes the presentations at school assemblies and graduations, according to Darvel Allred, awards chairman.

"This program was developed here in Upland," Allred said. "Our citizenship services committee wants students to realize that it is not only their teachers and parents who want them to be good young citizens, but that other people around town are interested in their social development, too."

Teachers did most of the selection for the award winners from the nine public and two private schools that participated this year, according to Darvel.

Students were chosen on a formula of 40 percent citizenship, 20 percent scholarship and 40 percent service both in and out of school.

The students chosen were Brian Kim and Kerstin Swenson from Baldy View School, Danielle Bauter from Cabrillo School, Michael Jones and Aimee Wideen from Citrus School, Alison Gerard and Santosh Nandi from Magnolia School and Jennifer Beard and Derek Shulte from Sierra Vista School.

Also receiving awards were Steffany Evans and Joshua Jensen from Sycamore School, Heidi Wood and Eric Mandujano from Upland Elementary School, Christine Naugle and Pete Raisbeck from Pioneer Junior High, Shannon Helman and Frances Kim from Upland Junior High, Douglas Davis from Ninth Street Christian School and Ray Hottinger from Carden Arbor View School.

All submissions should be sent to The Upland News, P.O. Box 4000, Ontario, Calif., 91761.

Upland adds construction funds

The Upland City Council voted to spend an additional $9,000 on materials for its city parking lot now under construction.

In addition to the $182,424 already approved, the council added $6,238 for street light poles in the Police Department parking lot and $2,930 for sidewalk replacement on the west side of the lot.

The gravel lot next to the police and fire stations and the paved lot next to the library and City Hall are being graded, and paved into one lot, creating 160 spaces. The project began June 23 and is expected to be completed in the third week of July.

Mayor Richard Anderson said the sidewalk funding was not originally approved because city staff wanted to save money by patching the present sidewalks.

"Because the bids (for new sidewalks) were so low, it seemed better to do it rather than have a mish-mash," he explained.

The light poles by the police station also were originally left off, City Engineer Fred Blanchard said, because it was cheaper to have lights mounted on the building.

College has priority registration

Priority registration is one of the special services offered to students whose physical limitations put them at a disadvantage during regular registration. Priority registration will be held Aug. 7 for those students who have received prior permission to attend from the Physically Limited Student Services (PLSS) office.

The Chaffey College Physically Limited Student Services Program makes available a wide variety of equipment and services to students with physical or communication disabilities. These include on-campus tram service, special parking, readers and note takers, mobility and test-taking assistance, print enlargers, manual and electric wheelchairs, cassette tape recorders, large print typewriters, Braille, talking calculators and a Porta-tel (TTY).

All students with physical or communication disabilities may take advantage of specific purpose counseling, vocational planning, job-seeking assistance, and referrals to appropriate agencies.

The purpose of the PLSS program is to assist students in acquiring the necessary knowledge and skills for increased self-actualization and independence as well as using acquired skills to gain a college degree or vocational development, according to Cathy Olivera, program director.

Additional Adult Education classes are offered in local community locations for adults who have become blind or suffered strokes. These classes provide help with independent living adjustment

Heavenly' youngsters like helping needy

By Andrew Horan

For a dozen children in Etiwanda, "heaven" on earth means giving money to other needy youngsters.

Last summer, the junior high school-age Etiwanda Congregational Church group raised $260 for starving children in Ethiopia.

Calling themselves "A Bit of Heaven," they sent "$200 to Mission Aviation (a relief organization)," explained Kelly Bourland, the group's adult leader.

"That was enough to supply a plane full of food and to fly it right into Ethiopia," she said.

'Another $60 went to the Save the Children Fund." Bourland said.

The fifth- through eighthgraders raised the funds with weekly bake sales after church services

"Everybody chipped in and brought something," remembered Billy Bennett, 12.

'Mostly our parents either made it or bought it from the store," he said

Regardless, their efforts were enough to win the group letters of praise and thanks from its two benefactors.

The mail "really lifted our spirits," Billy said.

They were writing to tell us 'thank you,' and that they want us to keep on sponsoring them."

This year, the group decided to help children suffering from cystic fibrosis.

"There's a lady in our church who had two children with cystic fibrosis," Bourland said.

The inherited disease, in which glands become clogged with a thick mucus, killed Donna Frantom's 18-year-old son.

But her daughter Jennifer, 26, is alive and well enough to run a summer camp for some 70 children suffering from the affliction.

'We collect money from businesses and families so that kids that have cystic fibrosis" can attend the Angeles National Forest camp for free, she said.

The $115 raised by the church was enough to defray the $110 cost of each child's one-week stay with enough left over to help pay for games and equipment, according to Frantom, vice president of the

Cystic Fibrosis Summer Camp of Southern California

The church group will go to camp as well, Bourland said.

They have been invited to meet the campers July 26 to see what their hard work won.

"I think it's really neat that we're helping people and stuff," said Kim Berzin, 13. "It'll be pretty neat to see what's going on out there, how we helped these people," agreed Dusty

Fontana schools get ready for influx of 3,000

By Marianne Aiken

The Fontana Unified School District is bracing itself for an influx of 3,000 new students by the end of next year.

To get ready for the crunch, the FUSD board of trustees last week agreed to hire the architectural firm of Wolff, Lang Christopher Inc. to provide architectural services for the construction of a temporary elementary school, a portable ninth grade facility and the third phase of a high school annex

However, those plans could change. The board voted in three separate motions to hire the architect for each project even though some board members said they disagreed with school locations and land-use plans

"Everything with us is a Band-Aid approach," because the district doesn't have enough money to build the permanent facilities it needs, said board member John Piazza. "We just have to drive an old car because we don't have the money to pay for a new one.

General site work and materials for the two temporary facilities will cost about $1.4 million, plus $231,000 a year to lease the portable buildings.

The third phase of the annex will cost $2.7 million. The annex has been dubbed Fohi (Fontana High) South.

By the end of next year, the district's enrollment is expected to climb to 19,000 students, and jump to 30,000 students by 1990, said Superintendent Anthony Lardieri

He estimated the district's current enrollment at a little more than 16,000 students.

Plans call for the portable elementary school to be built on Locust Street, south of Base Line Road, by September 1987, but Carl Coleman, the district's director of planning and research said the board could change the location if it wanted

There was more controversy over the idea of building portable classrooms for about 1,000 ninth-grade students on a corner of the Tokay Elementary School site until the district's second high school is built about five vears from now.

Victoria couple keeps residents up to date

'We have a vision, we want this to be the best community it can be'

Anyone wanting to know anything that is happening anywhere within the Victoria planned community in Rancho Cucamonga need only call the Youngs.

Since they moved into the large housing development in January of 1985, Jeff and Marcia Young have emerged as possibly the most actively involved residents of the growing community.

She edits a monthly newsletter called "The Victorian" for the housing development's 735 residents, is a member of two local PTA boards, belongs to the Neighborhood Watch Steering Committee and is secretary of Victorians for a Planned Community, a group started last year to oppose a sand and gravel quarry planned a few miles to the north of Victoria

He is co-chairman of Victorians for a Planned Community, writes many of "The Victorian" newsletter's informational articles and is assistant coach of a youth soccer team.

At 39, he also owns The Marketing Connection, a Rancho Cucamonga company that does marketing and promotion work for local cities, the county and developers.

"We're delighted to be part of this new, growing city called Rancho Cucamonga," Mrs. Young said. "We have a vision for this city. We want this to be the best community it can be. I think "The Victorian" facilitates that.'

She said many of Victoria's residents commute to and from Los Angeles and don't have time to become personally involved in issues of the community.

"I think they appreciate our work for them. We keep them up to date." she said.

Former Ontarian sets speed record, wins bicycle race

By Andrew Horan

Pete Penseyres never dreamed of setting speed records when, as a teen-ager, he pedaled a bicycle around his Ontario neighborhood delivering The Daily Report.

Almost 30 years later, Penseyres broke the course record by more than 16 hours in winning the fifth 3,107-mile bicycle Race Across America last week.

Penseyres, who now lives in the San Diego County community of Fallbrook, rode from Huntington Beach to Atlantic City, N.J., in 8 days, 9 hours and 47 minutes.

The 43-year-old chemistry supervisor at Southern California Edison's San Onofre nuclear power plant rode more than 360 miles each day by pedaling an average 15.4 mph.

He did it by following a rigorous diet and a stringent sleep routine.

"Approximately 80-90 percent of my diet (during the race) was liquids," he said in a telephone interview from the Atlantic City boardwalk Wednesday afternoon.

The liquid, developed especially for Penseyres by Chemique Pharmaceuticals of Whittier, "contains mostly carbohydrates, but also fat and protein ... and every mineral your body could ever need," he said.

"The big advantage of it," he said, "is that I could drink it under any weather condition.

"In other races, I've had trouble getting enough food down. Under heat and humidity there's nothing I want to eat except ice cream," added Penseyres, who won the race in 1983 and finished second in 1984

Ice cream plays a big role in the slim racer's life.

"I did something unusual this year," Penseyres admitted. "I went out to Palm Springs a week before the race to train in the heat and ate ice cream."

The normally svelte athlete ballooned all the way from 134 pounds to 142.

"I lost 5 pounds — about a pound a day — during the race," said Penseyres, who stands 5 feet, 9 inches tall.

Scouting director says girls need direction

By Suzanne Sproul

Miriam Brooks has always tried to give people a chance to succeed.

Her philosophy of allowing people to shine in their own ways started in 1956 when she worked with retarded and gifted youth in Pennsylvania. It has continued for the past 29 years with the Girl Scouts of the U.S.A., particularly the past 10 years with the Spanish Trails Girl Scout Council locally.

"I volunteered to participate in a 1956 roundup in Michigan and met a very effective recruiter for the Girl Scouts of the U.S.A..

"I believe in this organization's purpose: to educate girls to cope with the society they're in. I want the girls to feel good about themselves. Fundamentally, the Girl Scouts of the U.S.A. stresses character and ideals they can build their lives on," she said.

Brooks said all individuals have the right to experience those things in life they think are worth experiencing.

"The scout program is an open organization. It's not for whites or blacks. It's for everyone who wants to participate," she said.

Young girls face the same pressures from society and their peers as boys. Girls need direction, too, she said.

The Spanish Trails Council serves more than 15,000 girls and 4,800 adults throughout the West Valley and into Los Angeles and Orange counties. The council was named after El Camino Real, a Spanish roadway which linked the mission system in Southern California.

Scouting has changed throughout the years since Juliette Lowe started the organization March 12, 1912. The scope of the individual badges the girls work toward has expanded.

in addition to the traditional badges involving sewing, housekeeping and hospitality, the girls now can earn them for studying computers and marine life

"It's more of a blend of the old and the new," said the director of the Spanish Trails Council.

Brooks said she's also seen changes with the types of people involved as leaders.

More women work out of their homes, she said, and since more women work, the sizes of troops and the times they meet have changed.

Troop meetings usually used to be scheduled during the week after school, but now many are planned for Saturdays.

"When I think of scouting, I think of seeing the light go on when someone discovers they know they can do something. I enjoy watching people grow within themselves," said Brooks.

The scouting program is one of the greatest adult education programs in the country, she said. Leaders are trained and can earn continuing education credits for specific aspects of their work.

Evelyn Brown, Spanish Trails public relations spokeswoman, said Brooks' philosophies have helped the organization through its growth period.

"It's important to have an understanding of history and an

Member candidates sought for county CSD

The Community Services
Department for the county of San Bernardino is seeking member candidates.

The CSD is assigned the responsibility of planning, developing and implementing programs for alleviating poverty in the county. The Community Action Board of CSD is composed of 15 members — five represent the poor.

In order to qualify as a candiate to represent the poor, a person must meet the following criteria:

• Must be at least 18 year of age on or before Sept. 8, 1986.

 Must reside within the Second Supervisorial District Boundry.

 Must be able to attend monthly, night meetings and serve on CAB committees.

 Must not be a paid staff member of the Community Services Department or related to a staff member of the Community Services Department, members of its Community Action Board, or the County Board of Supervisors.

 Must submit a nominating petition endorsed by 25 eligible voters from his/her district no later than 5 p.m. Aug. 15. Petition forms may be obtained in person from the administration office of the Community Services Department at 686 E. Mill St., San Bernardino, through Aug. 4. Petitions also may be mailed upon request by writing to the above address.

helped burn those ice creamladen calories away.

"Most of the people outside the race think that's impossible," Penseyres said of his 90-minute nightly naps.

"They think we're really strange."

After experimenting to discover how little sleep is enough, "we (now) know when and how often to sleep to prevent strange things from happening to us mentally."

For Penseyres, 90 minutes before dawn was just right. With that, he could stay alert enough to cherish all the wonderful — and not so wonderful — experiences of riding cross country.

"The low point came about the fifth day, when I looked back to the start of the race and it was so long ago I couldn't even remember it," he recalled.

Riding along a stretch of flat Arkansas farmland, "I was bored to death, ... facing eight to 10 hours before I could lay down to sleep. Mentally, I couldn't see myself making it through the night," he said.

The tide turned quickly, however.

"About a half-hour later, my wife told me she had a surprise for me and I would really like it." Penseyres was not hallucinating. His wife was part of the eight-person crew that accompanied him.

Suddenly, a car pulled behind Penseyres. A long-time friend who planned to stay behind this year after three previous trips boomed a joke over the car's public address system, and Penseyres was back on track.

"He's not just a mechanic, he has an imagination and a sense of humor that are unrivaled," Penseyres said of the unnamed crewman.

"He got me through the night."

all-around sense of people. That also is a strength of the program," Brown said.

During the past five years, Brooks said, the council has experienced a steady growth.

If it is to continue to succeed, the council must grow and consider the population makeup of the West Valley, according to Brooks.

Builder may settle dispute Victoria/from Page 7 between city, store owner

By Stuart Dedic

The developer of the Village of Heritage planned community in Fontana may settle a dispute between the city and a store owner who claims the shutdown of Base Line Avenue has cost him about $20,000.

Willard Maust, who owns the Ranch Egg Store at 15784 Base Line, said last week that former B.D. Fontana co-owner Jo Dilorio sent him a memo saving the company would like to reach a settlement.

However, with Dilorio no longer part of the North Fontana project, the firm seems cautious about the negotiations with Di lorio, who agreed to leave the firm two weeks ago, could not be reached for comment.

Maust had filed a claim with the city asking for $1,000 a week in lost profits since the road was closed for construction in February. B.D. Fontana planned to build a box culvert - a rectangular drainage channel to handle runoff expected from the Heritage.

Maust, whose claim the City Council rejected at its meeting last Tuesday, said his business was devastated by the shutdown.

The city said it was not liable for any damages — that B.D. should be responsible for any ummer may be half over, but some kids are still in school.

A July 7-Aug. 1 program in . the Central School District is keeping kids on their toes until the school bell rings again in the fall.

About 500 students are enrolled in the four-week program being held at Cucamonga Junior High, said summer school principal Barbara Kisstinger. Kisstinger is assistant principal at the junior high during the year.

Resource specialist Susan Blume is keeping kindergarten-through-eighth grade kids busy in her special education class, with the assistance of teacher's aide Price Hall.

"We do everything in here," Blume said.

She described the students as those of average-to-aboveaverage intelligence who have learning disabilities.

On a recent Thursday morning, children worked on pairing cards together to learn reverse symmetry, while others sculpted, made coil pottery, worked on a computer terminal, and listened to tapes to count syllables.

"We use a multi-sensory approach," Blume explained.

There is a learning plan for each child, with enrichment in basic math, reading and science skills and a little behavior modification mixed in, she said.

At a table in the corner of the classroom, Hall worked with two children learning about American history, starting with the physical geography of the world's continents

The children colored each continent a different color in coloring books.

"We're doing a little reality, too," Hall said, "putting an X on Southern California to show where we live."

Hall said the purpose of the coloring exercise was to show there are ways of dividing up the world "other than political boundaries."

Several classes are learning about "The Voyage of the Mimi," in which a ship sets out from the east coast on a scientific expedition to study whales. The crew of the "Mimi" includes a deaf woman. The children learn sign language in addition to the anatomy and habits of whales in the multi-media learning plan.

Teacher Jane Tangeman said she was taking her class of second, third, and fourthgraders on a trip to the beach to see tide pools as part of their ocean learning experience.

Children in a gifted and talented class made their own film strips with felt-tip pens.

Andrea Meyer, 9, told about "A Day in Las Vegas."

"It'll be a miracle if I remember how to run this thing," she said as she threaded the strip into the projector.

Meanwhile, out on the playground, the teachers counted the days until the summer session ends.

"Only two more weeks," said one as another teacher leaned on her shoulder in mock exhaustion.

Girls State delegate considering career in foreign affairs

By Paula Monarez

Before attending Girls State, Christina Pratt had decided she would enter the medical field.

Now she is not so sure.

The Upland High School student was so impressed with and learned so much at Girls State that she now is considering a career in foreign

"You learn how government is really done," the 16-year-old said. "It is a very interesting field and it was really a great experience.

Pratt, along with 600 girls, attended the 43rd annual Girls State in Sacramento the first week in July.

The program, sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, gives high school students a chance to learn how local, county and state governments

A girl from every high school in the state is chosen.

Each girl is chosen by her school and the auxiliary

Pratt was chosen to represent Upland's American Legion Auxiliary Unit No. 73.

'Most people who were chosen had never heard of Girls State before," she said. "The only reason I knew about it was because my grandmother is in the auxiliary.

During the week-long program, which was housed at Cal State Sacramento, participants ran for office, enacted city and county ordinances, prepared party platforms and passed legislation.

Participants were assigned to a city and a county and either the Whig or Tory party. Thirty-six girls made up one city and four cities made up one county.

Attending four or five meetings a day was not uncommon. There were city, county, party and state

Pratt was assigned to Lassen city and county, which is located in northeast California, and she was a member of the Whig party, she said.

She also was chosen as assemblywoman from her area.

"When I first got there I thought, What am I doing here?" she said. "There were 500 girls I had never seen in my life. But later I made so many friends. On the last day everyone cried because they did not want to leave."

One of the highlights of the program was getting a tour of the capitol building and meeting Gov. George Deukmejian.

But the most memorable episode, which dealt with tax collectors, also was the funniest.

A number of girls are appointed tax collectors for the week. The girls tax participants on pictures of boyfriends, the number of clothes, and shoes and even for hairblowers and curling irons. The girls pay their taxes with play money.

In order not to get taxed, Pratt and members of her city kidnapped the tax collectors and made them promise in writing they would not tax them

"I never laughed so hard in my life," she said.

Although a girl can only attend the program once, Pratt is happy she participated.

Pratt and several of the other girls promised to keep in touch and are planning a reunion at Disneyland.

'Going to Girls State was one of the smartest things I have ever done," she said.

Status of Women unit elects new officers

The San Bernardino County Commission on the Status of Women has elected new officers

The officers comprise the executive committee for the commission, which was established by the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors in 1974 to act in an advisory capacity on issues of concern to women.

Elected as chairwoman is Jan Braunstein of Hesperia. Other officers are Christine Rice, first vice-chairwoman, Wrightwood; and Roberta Shouse, second vice-president, San Bernardino.

SPORTS

Foothill LL sets sights on next step: sectionals

Like any baseball team chasing a championship, the Upland Foothill Little League has a couple of hot pitchers. Pitchers a team can ride as long as their arms hold up.

And it doesn't hurt if the pitchers are also two of the better hitters on the team.

In Jason Boseant and John Anderson, Upland Foothill has two athletes which paced Upland to the District 23 Little League championship last week. Each won two games and each hit two home runs during the tournament in which Upland swept its five games on its way to its first district championship. The district victory advances Upland to sectional play beginning next Monday in Temple City.

Anderson won the first and fourth games and Boseant the second and the championship games. Jeff Liefer won the other.

"We've been a good hitting team, but our strength has really been our pitching," Upland manager Phil Sayers said.

That showed in the last three games.

Liefer won a 2-1 decision on a four-hitter in the third round of the winners bracket to give Upland Foothill the inside track to the tournament finals.

Anderson, who homered in that third game, came back with a strong performance in the semifinals, surviving a five-run fifth inning by Ontario Eastern to win a 7-6 contest.

It was Boseant who provided the offense in that semifinal victory. He went 3-for-4 in that game with two RBI, getting two hits in the first inning when Upland scored all its runs. He scored the first run of the inning when he stole home after singling to lead off the inning. His two-run double capped the inning.

"He's got the good speed and he gets on base, that's why we have him batting lead off," Sayers said of Boseant, who appears a little bigger and stronger than most leadoff hitters.

Boseant had his best night in the championship Friday against Chino American. He threw a five-hitter and hit two home runs to stop a Chino American which was on a roll, 5-3.

Chino had lost its first game of the tournament and had to take the long route through the losers' bracket to reach the final round. While Upland played only five games, Chino had to play eight and actually won more games, finishing 6-2.

"You have to give them a lot of credit," Sayers said. "If you lose either your first or second game — especially the first — it makes it so tough go anywhere. We certainly didn't expect to see them in the finals."

"It certainly was an uphill battle for us," Chino American manager Jim Sidoti said. "But these kids are battlers and we didn't plan on giving up."

Not only did Chino not give up, but they even jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the championship. But Upland tied in the bottom of the inning and took the lead for good on three third-inning runs, two on a homer by Boseant. He hit another in the fifth to close out Upland's scoring.

Having done enough with the bat, Boseant went to work on the mound, not letting Chino runner to second after the first run until Chino closed the gap on two-run seventh inning home run by Basil Acree to account for the final score.

"It was one of the best games he's pitched all, including the regular season," Sayers said. "Everything worked tonight."

Including the pitching and the hitting.

LOCAL BRIEFS

National LL

Anthony's Furniture captured its fourth consecutive Upland National Little League baseball championship in the season just completed.

Manager Roy Schwarzer guided the team to the crown by defeating Lockheed-Ontario Management 4-0. Scott Rivette struck out 12 in pitching a one-hit shutout for the champions.

Zack Gross had two hits for Anthony's as did his mates Aaron Gomez, Trever Hargrove, Noah Rentmeester, Rivette and Guy Rojas. Willie Woo had Lockheed's lone single.

Upland's National Minor League champions were Pizza Chalet managed by Joe Hughes. They defeated Sizzler 17-9 for their second title in two years.

Johnny Cervantez, Sonny Ramirez, Scott Schultz and Larry Steinke were the leading hitters for the champs. Anthony's opened play Monday in the Little League Tournament of League Champions.

Other Upland representatives in the week-long, singleelimination tournament included Kiwanis of Upland American Little League and Action Awards of Upland Foothill.

By Kimberly Heinrichs

The Upland City Council approved a revised contract Monday with a Rancho Cucamonga architectural firm to design a new police facility.

The rate structure has been changed, Mayor Richard Anderson said, to save the city money. Wolff, Lang, Christopher Architects Inc. will charge 7 percent of the value of the project, up to a limit of $3.3 million. Lower percentage rates will be charged beyond that, Anderson said.

Other changes include expanding the firm's work on the project to interior design and layout at the same cost, Anderson said. In addition, travel expenses and fees for additional architects from outside the firm were taken out, he said.

Anderson said he is hoping the project, which is tentatively planned for a city lot near the city yard on Benson Avenue, will be in the $3-4 million range.

The council also voted to spend $90,000 to repair five intersections and add drainage pipes to carry away water from sprinkler systems running onto the roads.

The money is part of the $200,000 the council voted to add to the 1986-87 budget last month to make street improvements.

The intersections of 16th Street and Euclid Avenue, 17th Street and Euclid Avenue, 8th Street and San Antonio Avenue, 9th Street and San Antonio Avenue and 8th Street and Mountain Avenue will be repaved.

'That's what we're doing at these corners that history has shown us we had to repair three to four times a year,' Councilman Frank Carpenter said. "We want to do it right once and for all."

Currently the water trickles across the road in dips designed for that water, but it is splashed up against the asphalt, eroding the pavement and causing need for more repair work, he said.

The council turned down a request for a $5,000 grant by the Opera Theater of the Inland Empire, which stages operas at the Gardiner Spring Auditorium in Ontario.

Reflexology: Treating from the ground up

By Jack Williams Copley News Service

The way to a man's heart may be through his foot. The left one, to be exact, directly under the

No, we're not talking erogenous zones. And a few minutes of finger massage in that tender location isn't designed to foster any romantic attachments. But a little manipulation in the right direction - say about seven times - could stimulate the ticker to better perform its cardiovascular functions and maintain its overall

In fact, the manipulation of the feet - and hands - may enhance the well-being of a number of the body's organs, nerves and glands, according to a form of therapy known as reflexology.

Based on ancient Egyptian and Oriental methods of healing, reflexology has been practiced in the United States since the turn of the century. More than 6,000 health professionals are said to practice it in Europe. But it is not an exact science - and because some outrageous claims have been made in its behalf (some practitioners credit it with healing everything from cataracts to hemorrhoids), it has been either ignored or condemned by mainstream medicine.

Dr. Elson Haas, 38, who was schooled in the traditional confines of the University of Michigan, had no reason to believe reflexology had any value when he left medical school more than a decade ago.

But he was curious, receptive to alternative treatments and philosophies, and he suspected there was more to treating patients than he could find in a textbook. "I didn't mean to downplay Western medicine," he said. "I just thought there was something else out there - something that would help treat disease before the fact.

"Later, my experience taught me that the hands and heart of a doctor are the most important healing tools. The prescription pad is not so important as compassion, care and the

In embracing reflexology, Haas could cite significant precedent. Hippocrates, known as the father of medicine, wrote, in the fifth century B.C.: "The physician must be experienced in many things, but assuredly in rubbing."

Reflexology emerged from that non-invasive, rub-for-your-health base. At its foundation is the belief that there are nerve endings in the foot and hand connected to every other part of the body. By manipulating the appropriate nerve ending, a therapist - or lay person, for that matter - can theoretically improve the well-being of that body

If a particular tenderness is noted, it is interpreted as a sign of potential distress in the corresponding organ.

As director of the Marin Clinic of Preventive Medicine and Health Education in San Rafael, Calif., Haas includes reflexology in what he calls a multi-disciplinary approach. Among the the maladies he addresses with reflexology therapy:

Insomnia. Headache.

Back pain. Upset stomach.

Fatigue. Sinus congestion.

"It is similar to acupuncture in working to stimulate organs and realigning energies," he said. "When energy is flowing properly, there is less fatigue and the mental and emotional aspects of well-being are improved. Like acupuncture, it is supported more by positive results than scientific evidence. "One of the major benefits of any kind of body therapy is that it puts us back in touch with our bodies. It's like coming home."

With a little schooling in fundamentals, you can practice it yourself, on yourself, suggests

"The idea of self-care," he said, "is really the '80s. Exercise and nutrition are coming to the forefront as ways to keep us healthy. Why not reflexology? Check it out and see what happens.

"It's something a husband and wife can do together. It's family therapy. You can do it in public - a shoe store is a good place."

LOS ANGELES - Mayor Tom Bradley, seeking "to apply the lessons of Chernobyl to our city," has asked UCLA Dr. Robert Gale to help organize an emergency team of doctors to respond to a possible nuclear accident at the San Onofre nuclear plant or elsewhere in the Pre-recorded messages offer wide variety of info

Guncheon's directory has 2,500 numbers

By Frank J. Green Copley News Service

If you suffer from insomnia, are an atheist or a fan of Bruce Springsteen or Nancy Reagan, play the horses and the singles game, and require daily reports on the status of volcanoes in Hawaii and avalanches in Anchorage, then Mark Guncheon has your numbers.

They're all in his "Incredible Dial-A-Message Directory," a listing of more than 2,500 message services nationwide that provide information on everything from apologies for all occasions to the best chiropractors in South Carolina. "Most of them offer solid information, but some are wacky, even raunchy," said the 32-yearold Chicagoan, who spends most of his time compiling soap opera summaries for telephone companies nationwide.

Diat-A-Trance (312-792-1051), for instance, is where you'll reach a Chicago hypnotist whose pre-recorded message will calm your nerves and help you sleep.

Dial-An-Apology (212-255-2748) lets callers listen in on a selection of sinners confessing and repenting their misdeeds, then apologize for their own transgressions after the beep.

If you want to just sound off, try The Philly Konnektion (215-677-1604) where malcontents call up to cry and moan about politics, sex and religion, among other subjects.

And for exotic weather reports, there's Dial-An-Avalanche (907-337-6742), Dial-A-Wave (808-847-1952), and the Volcano Eruption Report (808-

Guncheon said that message services have become a cottage industry since the proliferation of cheap answering machines.

"Virtually anybody with a machine can go into business," he said. Guncheon compiled his directory from 2,000 telephone books. His original list included 6,000 message services, but he pared the list down by omitting many religious-oriented recordings and local weather service reports.

The most successful services are sex-related. Some of the dial-a-girl numbers in New York make up to $10,000 a day, he said.

Most of the less-titillating services - such as Dial-A-Santa and Dial-A-Vacancy (a listing of homes for rent in Missouri) - may make anywhere from nothing to $200 a day.

"It all depends on the appeal of the subject matter and how well-publicized the number is," aid Guncheon.

He stressed that most services are not free, and that telephone companies charge callers from 50 cents to $2 per call.

"One couple earlier this year was shocked when they got their phone bill. Their son had called Dial-A-Santa 300 times in December without their knowledge, at 50 cents each time,"

Guncheon said Not surprisingly, California is the industry trend-setter, with something called "input-output" lines being the newest wrinkle in message

Take the Bruce Springsteen lines out of Los Angeles. Fans of the Boss can call 213-205-7980 and listen to 15 minutes worth of idolators' raves, then phone 213-205-7985 to sing their own hymns of praise to the rock star. The religious capital of message services, by far, is Texas, Guncheon said. He counted more than 100 Dial-A-Prayer numbers in Lone Star state phonebooks.

For a little balance, there's even the Texasbased Dial-An-Athiest (512-458-5731), where Madalyn Murray-O'Hair offers daily sermons to non-believers.

By Jon Funabiki Copley News Service

In Tokyo, where avocados once were rare, grocery store demonstrations now are held to teach shoppers how to pick a ripe one and recipe cards are handed out showing avocados served with everything from sushi to caviar.

It's all part of a 10-year-old promotional campaign by the California Avocado Commission that helped push avocado exports to Japan to a record 5 million tons last year.

But although the Irvine-based commission sees another potentially lucrative market in South Korea, it has no immediate plans to launch a similar campaign there.

To do so, commission officials say, would require learning a different culture and way of doing business, hiring new consultants and financing another high-stakes promotion campaign abroad. In addition to which, South Korea has so far refused a long-standing request to approve the importation of avocados.

The commission's predicament exemplifies the paradox that the Pacific Rim presents to California's struggling farm industry, which has suffered a slide in its overseas sales since 1981.

On the one hand, the region has emerged as California's most important export market and the target for future growth in sales. But at the same time, it presents California farmers with some of their most vexing

According to industry leaders and trade experts, the following are some of the major forces hampering California farmers' performance in the Pacific Rim:

Until its recent devaluation, the high value of the dollar made U.S. farm products overpriced in Pacific Rim markets, which cut sharply into California exports. And recent moves to lower the dollar's value have not yet had an impact on overseas sales.

Government policies in South Korea, China and other Asian nations aimed at achieving agricultural self-sufficiency.have caused those countries to buy less imports, and in some cases to become serious competitors to California farmers selling cotton, rice and other produce.

A number of Asian countries, among them California's best customers, have imposed quotas, high tariffs and other requirements restricting the importation of foreign farm products. Because of the diversity in cultures and business practices in Asian countries, cultivating markets in the region is a formidable task that can require huge investments, long-term commitments and a willingness to do business in new ways.

For the state's farmers, who send one-fifth of their crop overseas, the problems assume an even greater importance since the Far East outstrips all other world regions in buying these products.

Five Asian countries alone are responsible for two-thirds of California's overseas agricultural sales, according to the state Department of Food and Agriculture.

Japan ranks as the No. 1 buyer, accounting for 31 percent of the state's farm exports. followed by South Korea, Hong Kong, Indonesia and Taiwan. In comparison, Europe accounts for 21 percent of California farm exports and Canada 15 percent.

Many in the farm industry are staking their futures on the Pacific Rim markets, arguing that European markets have stabilized. And while the almost double-digit economic growth experienced by several Asian countries in the 1970s and early 1980s has waned, many analysts believe that growth in the Far East will continue to outpace Europe. Combined with the region's massive population, the future market there is potentially golden.

In addition, California's strategic location on the West Coast of the United States gives it a transportation advantage it does not enjoy in the Atlantic

'More and more people are turning away from the European community," said Jean-Mari Peltier, an agricultural consultant for the California State World Trade Commission. "Our traditional markets have dried up in a number of commodities in the European community, but the Pacific Rim continues to be the market of the future for California agriculture.

accident," the mayor wrote. "Moreover, recent events remind us that radiation clouds respect no geographic or political boundaries," he said. "The tragedy of Chernobyl challenges us to prepare.'

The San Onofre plant is on the coast in northern San Diego County.

Bradley asked Gale to help him form a "Los Angeles Nuclear Emergency Response Team" of doctors and facilities able to provide "immediate medical assistance of the kind you and your colleagues supplied" to Chernobyl victims.

He said he hoped the Los Angeles team would be a model for other cities to establish similar programs.

Gale, who along with other UCLA experts performed bone marrow transplants on Chernobyl radiation victims, was out of town on a trip to the Soviet Union with industrialist Armand Hammer. The pair left Los Angeles Thursday to ask the USSR to establish a study of the 200,000 Soviet citizens exposed to radiation in the April accident.

As for the local emergency team, Bradley suggested it include a list of medical volunteers prepared to "swing into action in the event of a nuclear power accident anywhere in the country.

It would also include a list of facilities in the region - and nation - that would be willing to take radiation victims in the event of an accident.

Bradley said the medical team should also prepare "action plans" and necessary medical protocol to cope with the unique problems posed by a nuclear

The mayor urged Gale to meet with him on the matter upon his return from the Soviet Union.

Mexico City visa processing suspension impact felt

By Arthur Golden Copley News Service

TIJUANA - Three months ago, the U.S. Embassy in Mexico City suspended processing nonimmigrant visas as a security measure after several bomb scares at the diplomatic facility.

These days, the impact of the continuing processing suspension is being felt at the U.S. consulates in Tijuana and Guadalajara, where Mexico Cityarea residents now comprise a large percentage of their visa applicants

As a result of the suspension. increasing numbers of people from Mexico City who want firsttime U.S. travel documents are applying for them in Tijuana and Guadalajara.

So far this month, about 350 Mexico City residents have been traveling to Tijuana every week an 1.800-mile journey from the capital - to apply for the documents, said Robert Emmons, Tijuana's U.S. consul general

Indeed, Emmons said, the suspension of visa processing in Mexico City is directly responsible for a 25 percent increase in the number of nonimmigrant visa applications filed at the consulate here.

T've been stationed in Tijuana since October 1984, and it's never been busier," Emmons said in his office on the second floor of the consular building near the Agua Caliente Race Track

Summer vacation time is traditionally a hectic period at all U.S. consulates in Mexico. But the crowd of applicants outside the Tijuana consulate on Thursday was so long that staffers for the first time began issuing "admission tickets" to people who were still in line at the end of the day. The tickets entitle the bearers to return the following day without having to wait in line.

Yet by mid-morning Friday. newcomers had formed a line that stretched from the doors of the consulate, around an outdoor restaurant and through a vacant lot a block away.

The consulate estimates it is handling around 270 nonimmigrant visa applications a

The lines are even longer in Guadalajara. Recently, said consular spokesman John Rowny, as many as 800 Mexico City-area residents a day have been applying for non-immigrant visas in Guadalajara, 360 miles northwest of the Mexican

Besides the out-of-towners, Rowny said, the consulate in Guadalajara handles some 1,200 non-immigrant visa requests a day from local residents.

"What with the people from Mexico City and the people from Guadalajara, it's like every day is a new record for us," he said.

Vince Hovanak, a spokesman for the embassy in Mexico City, said that the U.S. government was well aware of the hardships the suspension of visa processing was imposing on residents of the capital.

However, Hovanak said, the suspension will remain in effect until construction of a building devoted exclusively to visa processing is completed.

Redo old trunk for decorative storage space

By Kelle Banks Barfield Copley News Service

No matter how large or small your home, adequate storage space always seems to be a problem. One project that can help eliminate this problem is a decorative storage trunk.

Foot lockers are ideal units for this project. If you have one stashed away in the basement or astic, turn it into a stylish window bench that becomes a clever place to hide old magazines, family photos. winter blankets or unused knickknacks you can't bear to throw away

First, clean the trunk or chest thoroughly and remove mildew by wiping with diluted chlorine bleach. Then allow the chest to dry completely in a well-ventilated area. Drying it out in the sun is an excellent way of speeding up the process and ridding the trunk of the pungent odor of laundry

For a fast, simpler project, you may decide just to paint the chest with two coats of flat or gloss enamel. If you have a partial roll of wallpaper left over from an interior design job, apply this to your trunk. The application won't take long and you'll end up with a smart accessory to complement your

For a fancier finish, try adding a fabric skirt around the sides of the trunk. Measure a length of fabric 11/2 to 2 times the distance around the trunk. (If you decide to run the skirt along the sides and front only. don't include the back of the trunk in your measurement.) Then fold and press the fabric along its length so that it is the same width as the distance

Scientist found Legionnaire's disease cause

PHILADELPHIA - Ten years ago last Monday, delegates from the Pennsylvania American Legion cheerfully checked into the Bellevue Stratford Hotel. It was a bright July afternoon bustling with the arrival in Philadelphia of 3,500 conventioneers, bright with the promise of the city's Bicentennial summer, the summer the city asked the world to watch its grand 200th birthday party for America.

Instead, the world watched in horror as 182 of the delegates attending the Legion convention July 21-24 became deathly ill and 29 of them died. Among others who came to Philadelphia at the same time to attend the Eucharistic Congress, a candlemakers' convention and a magicians' convention or who had been in or near the Bellevue, 39 more people became ill and five of them died.

What happened in Philadelphia in the steamy days of July 1976 was one of the most perplexing outbreaks of disease in history. A virus? A mutant bacteria? An exotic poison? A plot? No one knew at the time. Researchers focused on toxic chemicals - nickel carbonyl, diazomethane. Swine flu and parrot fever were suspects; so was rickettsia, a germ that causes Rocky Mountain spotted fever, typhus or deadly Q fever.

The Philadelphia Veterans of Foreign Wars suspected a conspiracy by radical groups, "a sneak attack against the finest kind of Americans." Others dreamed up feverish schemes: bizarre poisons lost, stolen or misplaced by the Pentagon's super-secret labs. Researchers combed restaurants and hotels near the Bellevue, looking for they knew not what and finding only fear.

So it was that a tiny piece of the lung of a delegate who had the pneumonia-like symptoms that often foretold doom was sent, with little notice, to the laboratory at Hahnemann University School of Medicine, to Dr. Sheila Moriber Katz, 33 - a little-known pathologist, just two years out of her residency. mother of two young children, frightened human being ... assigned to study the only living specimen from an apparent plaque.

Now, 10 years later, Katz, 43. well-known scientist, professor of pathology, established hospital administrator, married to a doctor, her two children in college, can recall the day she felt "at the peak of intuitive power ... computer-like" in her concentration, so receptive to stimulus "I felt like I was made of glass." She can recall in haunting poetry the moment she became the first to see the face of the killer, what later would be called Legionnaires' disease.

"It was a moment," she said recently, "like touching the Federation, agrees. "We have an awfully targe opportunity there if you look at the population and the growing economies of the Pacific Rim," said Voss, whose organization represents 85 percent of the state's farmers.

"For California and the West Coast in general, we have the advantage of transporation and other things that should make it an exciting market.

But farmers are becoming increasingly vocal about impediments to trade in the Pacific Rim, especially since state agricultural exports have declined steadily since 1981 when their total value hit a record high of nearly $4.2 billion.

In 1984, that export total was down to $2.9 billion. While 1985 statistics are not yet completed, Ray Borton, senior agricultural economist for the Department of Food and Agriculture, said he expects to see a further decline.

They usually follow the same pattern as the national figures, and the national figures are down." he noted.

Security Pacific National Bank, in an internal report for investor clients, projected that total farm exports in 1985 would decline to $2.7 billion and fall again in 1986 to $2.6 billion

The biggest loser has been cotton, California's most important export crop, which suffered a 45 percent drop in overseas sales between 1980 and 1984. California cotton growers have been pummeled by heavy production worldwide, and in the Pacific Rim, their most threatening competition has come from China

"The People's Republic of China, which was an importer of about 13 million bales a year of cotton six or seven years ago, is now a net exporter," said Voss. That will limit any rapid expansion of cotton (exports) in the Orient for the next few

Rice is a similar case. Farmers face stiff competition from South Korea and Thailand, as well as a restricted market in Japan where the government is under heavy political pressure from its farm constituents. "It's just another example of Japan wanting to export to the entire world and buying nothing in return," said Ralph S. Newman, president of the Sacramento-based Farmers Rice Cooperative.

In contrast, the state has seen improvement in the export of almonds, citrus and an assortment of fresh fruits and vegetables.

One of the farmers' biggest problems is trade restriction. which comes in many forms Japan, California's best agricultural export customer, is the target of the most vocal complaints. Some of the more longstanding ones have resulted in action: Japan has increased its quotas on imports of oranges and beef and slightly reduced tariffs on products ranging from wine to walnuts.

Anne Burton, a trade specialist with Voss' state farm bureau, said one of the more contentious issues is Japan's strict sanitary standards. Japanese officials say the standards are intended to protect country's farms from infestations of new pests and diseases, but California farmers contend some of the programs are unnecessary and intended only to keep out foreign products.

For example, farmers say it is not economically feasible to ship head lettuce to Japan because it is subject to fumigation to kill off aphids, which they say, damages the lettuce, renders it unmarketable and is unnecessary because aphid infestations already exist

"It seems reasonable to quarantine something if they don't have the pest, but they already have it, so they shouldn't be rejecting the product," said

However, Katsuyuki Moriguchi, a Japanese agricultural official who works in Los Angeles, pointed out that the United States has similar concerns. Japanese mandarin oranges are prohibited in California and other orangeproducing states because of fears they might bring in citrus

Japan is not the only target of complaints. South Korea, seen as a potential boom market because of its fast-growing economy and the 1988 Olympics, has a strict system of regulating what products are approved for

"They tie the amount that they license to be imported to the amount they export. .. Burton. "This is an effort by them to balance their trade, but we say it's a trade barrier.'

In Hong Kong and Singapore,

California wine-makers have complained about high tariffs on wine. And in Taiwan, according to Burton, Californians have complained of a "double invoicing" system that makes them pay higher than anticipated tariffs because the value of merchandise is mysteriously inflated once the shipment

Industry leaders note that while these and other disputes can be settled through trade talks between countries, the problem of learning how to conduct business in an international marketplace can't be negotiated away.

The avocado industry learned, for example, that the biggest hurdle to marketing avocados in Japan was not tariffs, trade barriers or legal problems, but simply learning how to deal with the culture, said John Bartelme, president of the California Avocado Commission.

The commission relied heavily on a Japanese marketing consultant and advertising firm to conduct its campaign, which so far has cost $2.9 million in commission money and special federal export promotion funds.

Going to work can be hazardous to health

Office air can be irritating to workers

By Rod Riggs Copley News Service

Some days, going to work can be hazardous to your health.

Literally.

Smog-toughened Americans may find hard to believe an American Lung Association finding that air in a nice, cool air-conditioned office may be more irritating and more sickening to workers than the air outside.

But if the person at the next desk is irritable; complains of headaches, nausea and fatigue; coughs, sneezes and has difficulty breathing, it may not be the job. It may be the place where the job is done.

Sources of irritation are many. The situation holds its problems for the owner of unrentable or unusable office space, or for the employer finding absenteeism boosted by unidentified and unmeasurable causes. And the potential costs of such situations are magnified by the threat of litigation.

Although the phenomenon is barely a decade old, clues do exist. In new offices, likely sources of indoor air pollution are chemical, and include the materials of which a modern office is made.

Formaldehyde fumes escape from furniture, upholstery, wood paneling, drapery or carpet fabrics. Solvents and adhesives emit fumes. Copying machines and other photochemical reactions produce ozone. And people breathe, releasing carbon dioxide and water vapor.

In old offices, likely sources of irritation include dust; mildew; old tobacco smoke; flaking paint and asbestos-based insulation; flooring or roofing materials; and again those microorganisms from people, animals and plants.

The problem is a product of the energy crisis of the early 1970s and some of the solutions proposed, according to health and engineering specialists. Rising costs of energy focused attention on building operations, including the heating, ventilating and air-conditioning systems. Up to one-third of the energy cost of operating a building goes toward heating or cooling the air inside and moving it around.

Standard procedure had been to exhaust some of the interior air and replace it in the system with fresh air drawn from outside and warmed or cooled. Then engineers found heating or cooling bills could be cut by recirculating air within a building, leaving less to be treated and added to the system.

So they added insulation and closed up air leaks. Energy costs fell, and building owners and employers were pleased.

But the result, health authorities have concluded, is an unhealthy office environment: the "tight building syndrome." However, because the energy crisis and this particular solution are only about a decade old, conclusive evidence is sketchy. But suspicious circumstances abound:

A total of 67 telephone company workers in San Diego complaining of eye irritation, nausea and respiratory discomfort are sent home or to hospitals in three separate incidents in late March and early April 1984. The one-story office building is evacuated on two of the occasions. A consultant's report suggests the problem may be the combination of outside air with nonhazardous odors in the building.

Pacific Bell spokesman Tom McNaghten said no cost was assigned to the incidents, although "there were two evacuations and no one was in the building part of the time." Lost time costs, he said, "involved up to 120 operators for parts of four or five days." No changes were made in the building and no additional problems have surfaced, he said.

California state employees move in 1981 into the newly completed Bateson Building in downtown Sacramento, heralded as a model of energy efficiency. Soon, many complain of nausea, breathing problems and other ailments. A survey of workers on the fourth floor, where many of the reports seemed concentrated found 120 of them with health-related complaints. The director of general services said comprehensive air tests of the building environment failed to show toxic levels, but said the tests found "dust and cigarette smoke that could be the result of a lack of ventilation." The Bateson building is in use today.

A 35-story building in Atlanta, Ga., is left standing empty because the design ventilation system lacked the capacity to carry away pollutants which followed occupants into the building.

Some 2,000 workers in a newly remodeled Southern California accounting office report feeling ill. The problems are attributed to "offgassing" from new ceiling tile, new wall covering, carpeting and the paper used in the accounting procedures, all of which contained formaldehyde.

A consulting health engineer, Kenneth S. Cohen of El Cajon, said he has found, "in the absence of occupational chemical contamination, the normal building environment will not produce a problem."

In an office environment, complaints are most likely to result from inadequate ventilation or follow the use of new building materials. Such problems can be solved by increasing the outdoor air intake and "housekeeping" measures such as making sure ventilating equipment is operating properly and that filters are clean, consultants say.

But that may not be simple. Cohen, who works with employers nationwide, described an attempt to "blow the building clean" by running the ventilation system at full capacity.

"It took 24 hours a day, seven days a week for six months and cost $100,000 to reduce measureable contaminants to acceptable levels," he said. "But when the contaminant levels disappeared, so did the symptoms."

Employees may be asked to record symptoms, time of the work day and area of the building to assist in locating the source of the problem.

Cohen said "economizer packages," which superseded design ventilation systems during the energy crunch, "essentially stifle" fresh air makeup. "This is a recent phenomenon," he said. "It didn't exist 10 years ago."

Giving advice on indoor air quality is complicated by the lack of standards.

Occupational Safety and Health Administration standards apply to industrial and manufacturing situations, but Cohen and others call for more stringent rules for offices.

Cohen described as "a milestone," the adoption by the American Society of Heating, Refrigerating and Air Conditioning Engineers its standard 62-1981, "Ventilation for Acceptable Indoor Air Quality."

The standard first lists ambient air quality/lib/wiguidelines for a long list of materials, from darbonomonoxide and lead to chemicals likely to be the end byproduct of manufacturing processes — Figure 10st acetone, formaldehyde, methyl alcohel, vanadium and zinc.

Then it says, "Indoor air quality shall be at reso considered acceptable if the required rates of acceptable outdoor air are provided for the individual occupied space and no unusual indoor air are present."

The ASHRAE standard also provides that selection while a ventilation rate of five cubic feet of air per minute per occupant is acceptable in nonsmoking areas, the rate is to be 20 cubic feet per thinute per occupant in smoking areas. Cigarette smoke is considered an obvious contaminant by all authorities.

Hovanak said the suspension was ordered for the safety of visa applicants as well as for that of embassy personnel.

Eventually, under tightened security, the embassy resumed processing applications for immigrant visas and for renewals of expired non-immigrant visas. Hovanak said the embassy was handling about 1,125 people a day in those categories.

But before the suspension, Hovanak said an additional 1,250 people came to the embassy each day to apply for nonimmigrant visas.

Besides inconveniencing Mexicans, the suspension has cost the United States tourist revenue, said Richard Blom, head of the U.S. Travel Service in Mexico City.

In the first eight weeks of the 20,000 Mexicans dropped plans to visit the United States due to difficulties in obtaining visas.

Travel has picked up somewhat, he said, with people "adjusting to the difficulties" and traveling to Tijuana or Guadalajara to apply for their visas.

Blom's office had estimated that Mexicans would spend just over $2 billion on vacations in the United States this year, a slight increase over last year's total. But now, he said in an interview from Mexico City, this year's figure must be revised downward.

The U.S. government has temporarily dispatched two Mexico City consular officials to Tijuana and two to Guadalajara in an effort to handle the increase in business at those posts.

Fashioning one's own indoor floral arrangements is a happy bonus for the home gardener.

Fresh flowers brighten rooms

By Patrick Denton Copley News Service

If I had the time, I'd have the house continually filled with fresh flower arrangements, for there is nothing so uplifting and beautiful as fresh flowers in a room. But to keep vases and bowls constantly replenished with unfaded blooms and unwithered foliage requires a good deal of time and care.

However, there are ways of having the flowers without the work or at least with a minimum amount of time tied up in keeping lively bouquets of blooms in the house.

One strategy is to find a family member who enjoys picking and arranging flowers and invest that person as the official family flower-fixer. We have a natural in our teenage daughter, who puts together the most charming mixed bouquets by gathering flowers from throughout the garden. Her arrangements are the closet thing I've seen here to the very full and uninhibited arrangements to be seen everywhere in Holland.

With the unfettered imagination of the young, she includes in her flower mixtures things I would never think of adding. But with or without a resident flower-arranger apprentice to take over this pleasant chore, the time taken to keep fresh cut flowers in the house can be greatly reduced by observing a safe simple method of prolonging their life indoors.

Once a flower stem has been cut, its most crucial need will be for water - fresh, clean, life-giving water unimpeded in its flow through the stem vessels, in much the same way that we need an unblocked flow of blood in our veins in order to live. For this reason it's not a bad idea to take a flower vase or bucket of clean, lukewarm water into the garden with you when gathering flowers. Flower stems take in and transport slightly warmer water far more easily than they can cold water.

How efficiently a stem is able to transport that water through its vessels to continue the life of the flower will depend upon keeping those vessels unblocked. A clean, smooth cut made at an angle with a sharp knife or scissors will leave the vessels undamaged and open to the flow of water. Cutting cleanly on a slant is insurance against the stem end hitting flat against a container bottom, blocking its water intake.

There is no factual basis at all for the old belief that bashing the ends of woody stems like lilac and roses will open the stems and allow them to transport more water. The pounding or hammering damages and constricts the vessels, greatly reducing or even eliminating water intake. Even using a dull knife or pair of scissors to cut flower stems will squish the vessel enough to shorten the life of the flowers.

COLLEGE DE LA CONTRACTION DEL CONTRACTION DE LA CONTRACTION DE LA

Another way stems commonly become clogged and unable to transport water is from bacteria forming deposits in the vessels. This is why vases and bowls should be scrubbed clean before use, since dormant bacteria and fungi can come back to life in water.

Cut flower food, or floral preservatives, contain anti-bacterial chemicals to inhibit bacterial deposits from plugging flower stems and shortening the life of your cut

Air bubbles also commonly lodge in stem vessels to block the flow of water. This is the reason for recutting the stems about 1 inch from the base while holding them under water before arranging them. Leaves that would be submerged should also be removed. Especially if the foliage is crushed, it will release harmful substances that are taken up through the stems.

Once the flowers are arranged, keeping them out of sunlight and drafts and as cool as possible, will slow down evaporation from their surfaces and keep the flowers and foliage fresh for the longest possible time. Restricting the leaf area left on cut flower stems also helps reduce moisture

Disease/from Page 32

Ten years later, she can savor her role as a contributor to the vast web of research that ultimately identified and learned to treat the disease; as cocreator of a standard test for diagnosis; as author of the twovolume classic on the disease,

'Legionellosis," published in 1985. Her research contributed to the understanding of how the disease progressed. She was one of 100 American "heroes" profiled in Newsweek's special Statue of Liberty edition last Freed by the distance of time, Katz can even transform the disease with metaphor in her poem "Legionella," describing the surface of the ocean and a shark, lurking, unseen.

But on Aug. 3, 1976, Katz was simply frightened.

"I was concerned about its infectivity," she recalled. "I was working with tissue that was potentially lethal, and I found this frightening.'

Legionnaires' disease - a silent, mysterious, microscopic killer that baffled the best minds of science and medicine - had killed quietly and anonymously since at least 1947 in fleeting "UFO sightings," as Katz would later call them

Then it landed in Philadelphia, an invisible microbe that brought down the massive, stone, seemingly indestructible Bellevue Stratford, scared thousands of tourists from the city and sent hundreds of Philadelphians with cold symptons rushing to their doctors, wondering if they, too, were going to die.

Four blocks north of the Bellevue on Broad Street, at what was then Hahnemann Hospital, in a fifth-floor, concrete-block room painted dark purple, Katz hunched over a powerful electron microscope in almost total darkness, her face covered by a hood, as she scoped a luminous green moonscape - an astronomer turned to an inner galaxy, studying a microscopic fleck of a man's lung magnified 1,000 times, 20,000 times, 100,000

"I didn't know what I was looking for - a virus, bacterium, protozoa - or what the size would be," she said.

She skipped lunch. She worked through dinner, feeling no hunger, unaware of time, lost in microscopic cells. She did not think for a moment about her two young children at home. "I had no other needs. I needed to see. ... I was searching for clues. The footstep of a giant. A shadow.'

Slowly, something came into focus, something unlike anything Katz had ever seen: oval, gray, outside the cells, inside the cells, an invader groups of clustered, tortured circles. It was a germ, she thought, though doctors had found no presence of germs in the delegate's sputum or blood There were many of them, shaped like rods, like tiny coffins.

It was a moment, she remembers, of "intuitive, thunderbolt kind of thought, like lightning." Katz screamed.

"I knew I was looking square in the eye of the cause.

On Sept. 30, 10 days after last studying the microbe, Katz was at the 30th Street post office in Philadelphia at 5 p.m., waiting in line to mail photographs of the killer to other scientists, when she suddenly felt violently ill.

Next begin turning the fabric back into pleats along the folded side, pinning the folds into place. When you reach the end of the fabric, sew a running stitch along the pinned side and press. This reinforces the pleats as well as creating a seam along the fold.

If you have a wooden chest, you can attach the skirt simply by pressing a decorative upholstery tack into each pleat along the top of the trunk. Remember as you attach the skirt, to place it just beneath the lid of your trunk so you'll be able to open the lid! With metal foot lockers or trunks, sew a strip of Velcro along the back of the fabric skirt, then glue a corresponding strip of Velcro to the trunk itself.

For a window seat or a hall bench, add a finished look by making or buying throw pillows for the top of the trunk. If you Give readers the information they want and get the results... YOU want.

be complete.

Put yourself in the reader's place. If you were considering buying this item what would you want to know about it? Give the item's age, condition, size, brand name and any other information needed to describe it accurately and completely.

avoid abbreviations.

A few standard abbreviations can help you save space but don't overdo it. Too many abbreviations will make your ad look like a secret coded message. Rather than trying to figure out what you're trying to say, confused readers will go on to the next ad.

include price.

Price is one of the biggest concerns of classified readers. Ads that list prices will get their attention first. Including the price will also help you avoid inquiries from readers not in your price range.

be available.

List your telephone number or address so potential buyers will know HOW to contact you. State the best hours to call so they'll know WHEN to contact you. If you're not home when an interested prospect calls, chances are he won't call back
